TOWNS WANT TO BE CITIES

Several Alberta Towns Want Incorporation as Cities

Several of the southern Alberta towns will apply at the first session of the Legislature for incorporation as cities. Following are the places that will apply:

The town of Wetaskiwin, incorporation as a city.

The town of Lethbridge, incorporation as a city.

Town of Medicine Hat, incorporation as a city.
 The town of Macleod will also apply for an act empowering them to construct, purchase or otherwise acquire, maintain, regulate, manage and conduct public works of the nature of water-works, sewers, electric light and power works and telephone system or one or more of them, and to exempt such works from taxation.

The town of Red Deer will apply for extension of limits, also to incorporate the Red Deer Municipal Works Act, empowering them to construct, purchase or otherwise acquire, maintain, regulate, manage and conduct public works of the nature of water-works, sewers, natural gas, electric light and power works, operated by water power from the Red Deer river, steam, gas, electricity, or otherwise, and a telephone system and the acquisition of the municipality to use any of the said powers for domestic, commercial or other purposes.

THE TROUBLE IN NIGERIA.

The history of the British colony of Northern Nigeria where the massacre of a small garrison of native troops offered by Englishmen was avenged by the victory of the Punitive expedition over the tribesmen of Sokoto last week, is one of continual trouble with the natives, of repeated military expeditions for the suppression of risings and the abolition of savagery and barbarous native customs and practices. Many white men have met their death in the pursuit of these objects. Some have been killed in fights with natives; others have been massacred during sudden risings of tribesmen at distant outposts; while still more have fallen victims to the terrorism of the natives.

The establishment of a British protectorate over the extensive territories of Northern Nigeria dates only from 1899, when the country was taken over by the government from the Royal Niger Company, which had held a charter since 1886. The charter was obtained after years of hard work by Sir George Taubman Goldie who in 1871 visited the Niger and found that no lasting advance either in commerce or civilization was possible unless some government was established which would give peace and security to the natives and to the white men.

Sir George Goldie, by keen competition, lavished pecunia on native chiefs and the increase of his staff and garrisons, caused the disappearance from the Niger of French influence, which had been growing rapidly, and, but for the efforts of Sir George, would undoubtedly have resulted in the establishment of a French protectorate.

In 1885 a German explorer, Herr Fleisler, set out with a great expedition to Sokoto and Gando to secure treaties with the chiefs. He was, however, anticipated by the British company, who sent out Mr. Thompson and concluded treaties with the powerful Emirs before the German emissary arrived on the scene. The next difficulty was to secure the delimitation of the boundary between Nigeria and the German Cameroons, but the energetic Sir George succeeded in getting this done.

Ten years of pioneer work followed. Inter-tribal wars had to be put down, slave-trading suppressed, pagan sacrifices stopped and other abominations wiped out. All this time the efforts of the British colonizers were handicapped by the rivalry of the French, who by means of semi-military expeditions were attempting to extend the boundaries of the French Sudan. But Sir George and his able lieutenants conducted the campaign himself, and so well were his plans laid, and so rapid his movements that Northern and Southern Nupe and Ilorin, the centres of the rebellion, were quickly subdued, without very serious fighting. Foulah power was broken for ever.

Then trouble with the French on the frontier supervened and for some time threatened the maintenance of peace between France and Great Britain. Matters were, however, smoothed over, and the chief result of the trouble was the establishment of the West African Frontier Force, with headquarters at Jebba and strong garrisons at the various points on the frontier evacuated by the French. It was raised and organized by Sir Frederick Lugard, and consisted of about 3,000 Hausas and Yorubas, and over two hundred white officers and non-commissioned officers. This is the force which has had to bear the brunt of fighting since 1898.

Early in 1900 an expedition had to be sent against the Maushi tribe, a truculent set of cannibals on the Benue River, which had attacked an isolated British force. They were for the time subdued, but last month were reported to have broken out again. In 1901 an expedition was sent to Kontagora and Bida for the purpose of suppressing trouble caused by native pagan practices, and in September of the same year the Emir of Adamawa turned military expedition and in the following year Colonel Morland proceeded against the Emir of Kano, and took the town of Kano, together with Sokoto and Katsina. The Sultan of Sokoto fled but was pursued by Captain Sward, and finally killed after some severe fighting.

In 1904 another expedition was rendered necessary against the Okoto tribe, who had murdered Captain O'Riordan, and Mr. Amyatt Burney, and, except for the reported rising of the Mambila there has since been peace and order in the country.

At the end of 1904 Sir Frederick Lugard, the High Commissioner, made a tour of the country covering a distance of over 2,000 miles by land and 1,600 miles by water and was able to report in the most satisfactory terms on the condition of affairs. He recorded the submission of the last rebellious tribes and the final disappearance of the horrible rites and sacrifices which had once been so prevalent in the country. Trade was increasing, civilization spreading and new industries springing up.

His report provided convincing evidence of the advantages of British rule and the efficient way in which the day places of "Dark Africa" have been and are being opened to the light by the work of British pioneers.

TAKE NOTICE that an application will be made to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Alberta at its first session for an act to incorporate the "Edmonton and Athabasca Development Company," with power to construct a pipe line between the City of Edmonton and points along the Athabasca River to Pierre au Calumet for collecting crude and other oils and the delivery of the same to vessels and railways; to develop, construct and at list water power; to produce, transmit and supply electricity or other motive power, and to act as general manufacturers, merchants, wharfingers, and warehousemen; to acquire and operate mines, minerals and mining rights; to construct and operate pulp mills; to refine and reduce mines and mineral ores; to construct and operate electric railways; to acquire ships, wharves, and water rights and timber berths; to construct and operate telephone and telegraph lines, and to do all things that may be necessary or convenient for the purposes of carrying out any of the powers granted to the company.

INITIATORY POLICY

It has come to be the proper thing to say in criticism of the legislative forecast of a speech from the throne that the address was remarkable less for what was said than for what was left unsaid. Coined by no one knows who in the dim and misty past the remark has been handed down in our own Empire through generations of journalists, doing duty alike for the novice as yet uncertain of his bearings and of the old hand confronted by an epistle which he suspected but cannot fathom. It will probably continue to be kicked down into history by the critically inclined scribes who shall seek to pierce futurity and reveal the unannounced intentions of government. Nor is it likely that a phrase so pleasantly satirical and so frequently convenient would be allowed to remain the exclusive possession of writers of English and we hazard the guess that it has wandered beyond the confines of our mother tongue and now greets the eager seekers after knowledge wherever speeches from thrones are delivered and newspapers read. If the Russian opposition press is as energetic as the court reports would indicate, the political writers connected therewith have doubtless twisted the remark into the Slavonic tongue and the first oratorical effort of Nicholas to the assembled representatives of all the Russian next month will be greeted by a volley of declarations that said oration is conspicuous for its pauses rather than for its periods.

For once however this hackneyed phrase has been forestalled and the opposition press of Alberta must coin some criticisms of a different complexion or admit by silence that the Provincial Government has promised a sufficiently long program of progressive proposals for the session. A program which includes measures for the betterment of the dairying, live stock and other agricultural interests, for the thorough organization of the Province on constitutional lines, to repair and construct roads and bridges throughout the Province, to provide for the administration of justice, to undertake means for securing a cheap and efficient Provincial telephone service, to simplify and cheapen the procedure whereby laborers may secure their wages under the mechanics lien ordinance, to safeguard the registration of and alter the system of registration of land titles, to establish a Provincial university, to provide for the appointment of legal officers, to regulate coal mining and boiler inspection, together with the consideration of the public accounts and of the estimates for the coming year—much program should satisfy "even the most fastidious" of the intention of the Government of promptly carrying into effect the policy of initiation and development for the inauguration of which they were returned to power.

CURRENT COMMENT

March came in "like a lamb" and Saturday's snow storm indicated that it might leave us a very fair representation of the fleece.

Publication has not yet been given to the dark surmise that while Emperor or Bill does the talking, the man behind the noise is one President Castro, Esq., of Caracas, Venezuela, S. A.

The weather man appears to be as badly mixed in his notions of the kind of weather we ought to have as the Conservative party in their theories of the kind of Government we ought to have.

According to the Calgary Herald there were "several stalwart members of the Opposition" at the municipal convention in Calgary from which it might be gathered that "several" means two or less.

A wall of agony from its esteemed contemporaries is the applause which greets a Bulletin "scoop" and the wall occurs about once per issue. To whatever pleasure or profit may be found in this unintentional testimony to the enterprise of the Bulletin, its contemporaries are welcome. Meantime the Bulletin will continue to "print the news and print it when it is news."

There is nothing in the context to show that the Winnipeg Telegram referred particularly to R. L. Borden, M. P., when it announced that "It is 2,000 years since a philosopher of Rome sat down in his house near the temple of Jupiter, and wrote that 'The people must always choose their leaders.' It is possible that a leader may force himself on them, but they will 'In the end, have their way.' If the Telegram continues to wander around among those remote ages it may encounter a hoary tradition to the effect that Noah built an ark.

WILLOW SPRING SCHOOL DISTRICT

(Contributed)
About one year ago this district was organized. Since that time a very up-to-date school building has been erected and furnished. The ground is not yet cleared nor fenced, which we expect to do as soon as suitable weather comes. The building reflects much credit on the members of the school board, also on the contractor and builder, Mr. Geo. Meredith. Notwithstanding the fact that teachers are scarce, we were fortunate in securing the services of Miss O'Leary who began work on the first of the year, and who is proving herself a painstaking and successful teacher. Several persons were heard to say that the children gave the most interesting part of the entertainment which was held on the 9th. Several from the Bon Accord district assisted by readings and recitations. The musical part of the evening was greatly enjoyed by Mr. C. B. Beals of Edmonton and his son and daughter, Ray and Ruby. The last part of the pleasure, the selling of boxes, in which were many tempting things carefully prepared for the occasion, called forth a vigorous contest between the young men. The proceeds of the evening were $7.10. "God Save The King" closed a most successful entertainment.

THE WEATHER

Mar. 19.—The weather has been quite cold and mostly clear and calm throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The minimum thermometer registered 18 below in Northern Alberta and from 2 below to 9 below in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

COMPANIESWill Apply for Incorporation to Build Lines

The Alberta Gazette dated March 15, announces that no less than eight railway companies will at the first session of the Provincial Legislature apply for incorporation. If all these companies are granted certificates and the construction of the railways is carried on, Alberta will soon be covered with steel rails. Three of the companies, however, are local electric lines and tramways. The companies are as follows:

The Vermilion and Cold Lake Railway Company.
The Alberta Central Railway Company.
The Alberta Oil, Coal and Wheat Railway Company.
The Alberta Southern Railway Company.
The Montana, Taber & Edmonton Railway Company.
The Red Deer Radial Tramway Company.
The Pass Electric Railway Company.
The Crow's Nest & Prairie Electric Railway Company.

The Vermilion and Cold Lake Railway Company ask for power to construct, maintain and operate a railway from a point on the main line of the C. N. R. between Lloydminster and Vermilion City, or within the corporate limits of the said villages. In a northerly direction through townships 51, 52, 53 and 54, across the North Saskatchewan river, to a point near Lake to a point near Cold Lake; also to construct a branch from Vegreville, on the main line of the C. N. R. to the company's lines and to construct other branches, not to exceed thirty miles, from any point of the proposed lines.

The Alberta Central Railway wish to construct a railway from Edmonton to a point at or near the intersection of the westerly boundary of the province with the Peace River touching in its course points in the vicinity of Athabasca, Landing, Lesser Slave Lake, Peace River Crossing, and Dunvegan, and also from Edmonton, to Medicine Hat and thence to the boundary. And to construct branches from any point on the proposed lines, not to exceed fifty miles.

The Alberta Oil, Coal and Wheat Railway will construct a railway from a point on the Crow's Nest branch of the Canadian Pacific near Pincher station through Pincher Creek to the Waterton Lakes thence up Old Creek to the boundary.

THE TRIBUNE "BACKS UP."

(Winnipeg Tribune)
With a verbatim report of the evidence given in the famous Scott-McInnis trial, it is only fair to give Mr. Scott's side of the case on certain points where there is direct conflict in the evidence.

In its report of the evidence of the preliminary trial it will be remembered the Regina Leader-McInnis paper made Scott say that at the secret meeting between himself and McInnis, he had told McInnis that the price he could get for the railway charter referred to was $100,000—that is $10,000 for each member of the company. As McInnis was a member of the company this seemed to mean that Scott had offered McInnis $10,000—on certain conditions.

At the first trial Scott swore that his evidence had been misstated by the Standard, by the insertion of "each" after the $10,000, which Scott claimed was the amount he had mentioned as the price all the members of the company would receive.

The Standard had a reporter taking the evidence at this preliminary trial. He employed the word "each." The official court stenographer's report does not contain the word "each."

Scott swears that the official report shows what he really did say, and that the Standard's report shows what McInnis wanted him to say.

Here, then, is a direct contradiction in a statement of fact. It is only justice to Mr. Scott to make it clear that the official stenographer is on his side.

Another point brought out in the final evidence had reference to Scott's interest in the railway charter.

The preliminary trial revealed Mr. Scott in a very bad light—as a man who had used his seat in Parliament to enable him to secure a charter for a company in which he was a silent partner, a charter that was to be sold later and a share of the money handed to Scott.

At the final trial McInnis admitted that Scott was not a silent partner, that there was no understanding which gave Scott any claim to a share in the profits.

Scott also swore that this was true and explained that his only reason for expecting any monetary advantage from the sale of the charter was in consideration of his services to the company outside of Parliament.

The Tribune has not been requested to make any correction, but as it copied the original statement, it gladly and voluntarily hastens to correct any misstatement which it may have assisted in circulating.

The guests were Mesdames Ferris, White-law, Harcourt, Riddell, Secord, Hardisty, Knolls, Farquharson, Carmichael, Misses Willis, and Dixon.

Miss S. M. Cameron gave a delightful Girls' Tea on Saturday afternoon. The girls' hostess received in a dainty gown of white organdie, and was assisted by her sister Mrs. Powley, who wore a blue silk crepe de chene appliqued with roses and point lace. The dining room was most appropriately decorated with streamers of green and white, shamrocks here and there adding to the effect. The tea table was of the whole. The tea table was charmingly arranged with a centre piece of white chiffon over green tulle upon which rested a cut glass bowl filled with white carnations and maidenhair fern. The guests were Misses Scott, Webster, Greenwood, Maloney, Cushing, Wishart, Johnston, Ferris, Willis, Dickson, Matheson, Robinson, Dunlop, Reid, Cope, McCauley, McRae, Bingham, McDougall, Christian.
